Orient was designed in 1963 and was one of Jo Hammerborg's many commercial successes in the 1960s and 1970s. The timeless design and the solid, high quality materials have yet again contributed to Orient showcasing its worth in the 21st century.

The Orient pendant was originally created with five different surfaces. Lightyears is now launching a revamped version of the famous pendant, Orient Black. A matt black, aluminium pendant inspired by the original black design but with a modern twist. The matt surface makes the timeless design appear simpler and purer. The shade appears more discreet, while giving the rosewood's dark grain a more prominent role.

Orient Black is available in two original pendant sizes, $\varnothing 225$ and $\varnothing 340$ mm, and it can also be commissioned in a larger $\varnothing 500$ mm version. The large pendant creates new opportunities for interior decoration as it can be suspended high up, illuminate a large round table or form part of more comprehensive cluster formations. Furthermore, should you wish to combine the lamps in your interior decoration project, Orient Black also blends very beautifully with the copper design.
